Rear end collisions

Rear-end collisions are serious auto accidents that can lead to severe injuries and even death. They typically happen due to unsafe driving behaviors, such as tailgating and speeding.

Distracted drivers may also cause a rear-end crash by ignoring the road. This can include texting and talking on the phone.

These accidents can result in injury to the occupants of the trailing car, such as whiplash and broken bones. In addition, they can damage the vehicle's frame and other structural components.

T-bone collisions are often devastating accidents that can cause life-altering injuries. If you are involved in one of these crashes, you need a Tomball, Texas, auto accident lawyer to help you navigate the legal process.

A T-bone collision usually results from drivers not observing traffic signs and commands, such as stop signs or red lights. These accidents also occur when drivers are distracted, driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol, or driving while fatigued.

If you have been involved in a T-bone crash, you may be entitled to compensation for your injuries and other damages. To pursue these claims, you need strong evidence from the accident scene and a solid legal argument to support your case.

An attorney can help you understand the legal options available, including filing a claim with the insurance company and pursuing compensation in a civil lawsuit against the at-fault driver.
